

Recruitment Fraud Warning

Vantage Risk is aware of active fraudulent recruiting schemes in which individuals misrepresent themselves as employees, recruiters, or representatives of our company.

Please be aware that Vantage Risk will never request sensitive personal information, banking details, credit card information, Social Security numbers, passport information, or payment of any kind via email, text message, social media, or messaging applications as part of the recruitment process. All employment opportunities with Vantage Risk are posted through our official careers site, and candidates are asked to apply through our authorized application system only.

In addition:

- Vantage Risk does not charge job applicants any fees at any stage of the recruitment process.
- We do not request financial information or payment in exchange for employment opportunities, interviews, visa sponsorship, equipment, or training.
- Official communications from Vantage Risk will only come from authorized company representatives after you apply to a job opening on our official careers site or have applied through a third-party recruiter or search firm you contacted independently. All communication will be made via Vantage Risk email addresses using the vantagerisk.com domain.
- Offers of employment are extended only after completing our formal interview and selection process which will include multiple conversations either in person or via video conferencing.

If you receive a suspicious communication claiming to be from Vantage Risk, do not respond, provide personal information, or send money. If you want to confirm the legitimacy of a communication you receive, please reach out to inquiries@vantagerisk.com.

Vantage Risk is committed to protecting candidates from recruitment fraud and encourages all job seekers to exercise caution when sharing personal information online. Our privacy policies, including how we collect, handle and process information from job seekers can be found, here.
